The cabinet had been working night and day since the strike was threatened to arrange a compromise between the railway managers and their employes. Most of the credit for the mylimate augusts of their efforts are employes, Most of the credit for the ultimate success of their efforts appears to rest on the shoulders of David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, who, in his statements to parliament and in interviews with the managers and the men, worked for conciliation when all others of the interested parties seemed to have given erested parties seemed to have given

So far as technical advantage in the compromise goes, it appears to be in the men's favor, particularly as the managers consent to meet their representatives. The official statement conincrease in railway rates. The men claim victory for unionism on the point of recognition of unions.

Cultivation and Pruning of the Brambles

One of the greatest factors which affect farm crops and farm operations is the form of the surface of the land. An uneven surface not only makes ma chinery work with greater difficulty, but causes the crop to be spotted o uneven supply of moisture and ferwater, which carries with it the readily available plant food. If the surface is more nearly level the manure will stay more evenly distributed and there will be less areas suffer for the want of the moisture which helped to drown out the crop in other parts of the field during the rainy season.

Leveling can best be done while fitting the land for wheat, or in the spring when it is best prepared for se to a depth of several inches he season is not too busy.

Many leveling devices have been successful, and the one illustrated here does good work even where the land is very rough. It is made of stiff

2x12 inch plank, the sides being 18 to 20 feet long, and the cross pieces 's feet long. The front faces of the cross pieces, which push the dirt, should be faced with fron, to prevent ween of the cutter of the court of the court of the court of the cutter of year on the cutting edges. Cement Talk No. 2

Portland Cement does not come from Portland, Maine, or Portland, Oregon, and it was not first made at either of these places. It is called Portland because it was given this name by the Englishman who first made it. He called it Portland because he thought it resembled certain natural deposits on the Isle of Portland in England. Portland Cement is the fine powder produced by pulverizing the clinker-resulting from the izing the clinker resulting from the burning together of various materials of proper chemical composition. In the case of Universal Periland Cement, these raw materials are blast furnace slag and pure limestone. There are many brands of Portland Cement on the market, produced by different manufacturers. Universal is one of the best known and highest grade Portland Cement. You can always tell it by the name Universal and the blue trade mark printed on each sack. Forty million sacks of Universal are made and used yearly in this country. If you have any concrete work to do, you will make no mistake by using Universal Portland Gement Universal is for sale by representative dealers everywhere.

citizens went on the excursion to Waters after blackberries. After getting there they had to walk about two-and a-half miles to the berry patch. They got more than they could carry out at one time, so one of the men took two twelve quart pails to the depot, in tending to go back and help the res of the party with their berries. Find ing the depot locked, he put his pails down beside it, laid his jacket carefully over the pails, they were already covered with cloth covers, and went shape. When the party got to the depot, they found that some one had been there, smashed their pails with big stones and the berries had been fammed with sticks and stones unti the pails were only about half full three large stones were in the berries, the jacket was gone, but on emptying the pails, it was found in the bottom of one of them. There had been some boys around the depot while the man was gone. He says he don't believe the berries were there over an hour before he returned.

Fransporting Produce to Harket

produce to market liable to prove something of a problem. To the outsider it might appear simple enough if he does not take into consideration the numerous -factors that have bearing in the matter. For one thing, there is the weather, which must always be taken into account in planning a trip to market with produce, even though the journey is to be made over good roads. Then again, the product to be transported may be fragile; such as eggs or per ishable, as, for instance, some of berries and fresh fruits. Ar ly there is the necessity of taking into ecount probable market conditions at the prospective destination, for presumably produce will sell more readion "market days" than on "off

lem of transporting the

Despite the complications that seem inevitable there are a surprising number of American farmers who still persist in the practice of marketing their products direct to the consumer. Indeed, in some localities the number seems to actually be increasing rather than diminishing. This is all the more remarkable when we pause to reflect upon the facilities that are now being offered the farmer for marketing his produce at his own door. Agents of commission-merchants and "runners" for dealers in the large cities traverse rural routes, regularly, buying for spot cash eggs, vegetables, etc., and such a point have things progressed that the farmer who prefers may sell his berry crop on the vines and peaches or pears or apples on the trees leaving to the "other fellow" not only all the worries of transportation, but the bother of picking and packing and incidentally, the loss from waste At the same time there is no cermarket his own products has not the best of the bargain. He is very likely to have if his farm is located hear any good-sized town or city and if he is engaged in diversified farming or trucking. Of course the man who is farming on a big scale and devoting himself to a specialty, be it fruit or celery or nuts or grain will not haul his produce to town by the wagonload and dispose of it at first hand to the hungry housewives. All the same it is ten chances to one that he is following the same basic principles that are the wise ones for the farmer desirous of selling to the best ad vantage the varied products of a small farm. All the shrewdest men engaged in farming be they operating on a large or small scale principle of selling as directly as possible to the ultimate consumer. Obviously, of course, they cut out the middleman's profit and better yet, they are enabled to eliminate many of the loss in perishable products which have caused so much controversy between commission merchants and farmers. Finally, by marketing direct, the tiller of the soil can establish a reputation for the quality of his products and this is a most important asset for the man who expects to continue in the same vocation year after year. Indeed, building on the foundation of quality and prompt delivery he may build up a circle of patrons of his own that will render him independent of everything because they will stand year after year to take the entire product of his farm and take it, too, at prices higher than rule for the regular run of similar produce in the open market.

As the advantages of such plans of direct dealing have been brought home to the farmers they have been gradually perfecting their facilities for making the short cut from the farm to the city dinner table. The farmer who is a specialist in r vegetable raising or any other line likely to have his own sales agent who goes to the city with each consignment of produce and personally superintends its disposition, or if he is not operating on a big enough scale to do this single banded he is likely to join forces with severul of his neighbors to engage a representative who will handle their pooled products to the heat possible advantage. In any event the quantity of produce to be handled insures to the shipper thus situated the best of freight or express service if. indeed he has not adopted the particularly up-to-date method of transporting his farm products he means of motor trucks

The small farmer or truck gardener operating on a small scale cannot of course afford the lux-ury of a sales agent, but on the other hand he is no longer content, if he be wide awake, to divide profits with the commission merchant who in-sists on clinging to old ideas. So the small farm-er, if he belong to a rapidly growing class, makes it a practice to journey to the city two or three it a practice to journey to the city two or three times a week and to dispose of his products in the openair marts which are now a feature of almost all of our large cities. His canvas covered wagon is made to serve as his sales counter and he thus has no expense, in many instances if the farmer, or trucker be too busily engaged upon his farm to spare time for the selling end of the business in this fashion. this task is delegated to his wife, his son or his daughter. Particularly in the case of the young people do these periodical visits get to fill a large place in their lives. There are hardships to sure, not the least of them suggested by the fact that usually the trip to market must begin ere-daylight in order to reach the city in time to catch the trade-of-the-earliest marketers, but the farmer folk who have acquired the habit of huckstering in this way are invariably loath to give it up. Many a romance, too, has had its inception during the progress of the caravans of produce laden wagons to market or in the exchange of courtesies between the farmer folk congested urban market districts In the sparsely settled and more isolated sections of the country there are many odd spec-tacles incident to the transportation of produce to-market. In some localities where canals are yet in use the quaint, slow-moving boats are em-ployed to carry the catables, and in the south one may see donkeys bullocks and all manner of un conventional steeds pressed into service to move the foodstuns. Just here it may be noted that old-fashioned colored folk of the south take naturally to the conduct of portable market stands as a fish does to water. In a kindly climate-such-as-is-theirs-most of the staple vege

The great emerald seemed to have caught and be answering the light Naraini called the eye; in the stone's depths an infernal fire leaped and died and leaped again, now luridly blazing, now fitfully a-quiver, as though about to vanish, again strong and steady; even as the light of the strange emerald star above the moun tains ebbed and flowed through the night.

Naraini shuddered and cried out guardedly for very fear. "By Indur, to is even as the Voice foretold! me for the present."

"All right, you'll find the waiting here for you." As soon as the pair was outside the gate. David began. "I do not know why you should say I was aware of your whereabouts. I have been trying my best for nearly three months to find you. When I got back to the city I went at once to your father's house and found it occupied by strangers. Then I went to the firm from whom they had purchased the house; but they could tell me only that after Mr. Harland's sudden d cease his affairs were found to be in hopeless confusion and all property was sold. Of you they could tell me nothing. Then I called on Miss Brandon, who was the only friend of yours I had met. She told me that you had left the city immediately after your father's death, but she had no where you were. Then I spent three weeks in unsuccessful attempts to trace you and finally began to believe you had purposely concealed yourself from me, and when Robert—"

Miss Harland's scornful voice inter-rupted him, "Why should you tell this elaborate falsehood?" she asked, "Martha Brandon told me of your call in the first letter she wrote me, and said she gave you an account of my obtain CASTING ASIDE A FORTUNE ing this position in the Royceton school through the efforts of the cousin with whom I stayed until coming

USEFUL ABOUT THE HOUSE

monia Cleans Clothing and Paint and is Good for Numerous Other Purposes,

In housekeeping ammonia has man uses. It is an efficient help about the wardrobe. Black material, sponged with a cupful of water in which a teaspoonful of ammonia has been mixed, will-renew its freshness, while black silk will lose its objectionable tle ammonia will remove grease from collars, and when rubbed over corsets will cleanse them to a nicety. When mixed with equal parts of turpentine, ammonia will remove paint stains from cloth. If the paint is stubborn it may require several applications be fore the work is done. Persevere. Nothing is so good for boys' tweed suits as to sponge them with the ammonia mixture. For tollet use, a small quantity will soften the water in which the hair is washed and aid in cleansing the scalp. It renders the bath delightful, and carpets, when thoroughly gone over with ammonia and water, are surprisingly restored to something like their original freshness. When mixed with white wax and turpentine it makes the best of polishes for the floor. To relieve the pain and prevent inflammation result-ing from the bites and stings of summer insects ammonia ranks first as a cure.
